L Blueprint for a Modern Faith: 20th-Century Experiments in Bay Area Religious Architecture

BERKELEY CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF RELIGION

5:00-7:00 p.m. | 370 Dwinelle Hall

William Littmann, Senior Adjunct Professor of Architecture and Visual Studies, California College of the Arts, explores the history of experimental and radical religious architecture in Northern California, with a special focus on design after the Second World War, as architects responded to changes in liturgical practices in the Roman Catholic Church after Vatican II as well as the progressive ideals of Protestant and Jewish congregations in the region. He also explores the contribution of 1960s countercultural groups that further pushed the boundaries of religious architecture, often using forms borrowed from Native American and Buddhist religious traditions.

2 The Philosophy of “As If”: Kwame Anthony Appiah
Howison Lectures in Philosophy
BERKELEY GRADUATE LECTURES
4:10 p.m. | International House, Chevron Auditorium
Kwame Anthony Appiah, Professor of Philosophy and Law, New York University, will address the ideas of the philosopher Hans Vahinger, who argued a century ago that almost all of our theories of the world involved understanding things “as if” what is in fact false were true. Appiah will then use Vahinger’s ideas to discuss a contemporary philosophical proposal, due to Dan Dennett. A leading moral and political philosopher, Appiah has published widely on the topics of African and African-American literary and cultural studies. In 2012, he was awarded a National Humanities Medal by President Obama, and, in 2010, he was named one of the top 100 global thinkers by Foreign Policy Magazine.

1 Volunteer Tourism and Public Anthropology: In the Aftermath of the 3.11 East Japan Disaster
CENTER FOR JAPANESE STUDIES (CJS), TOURISM STUDIES WORKING GROUP
4:00 p.m. | 180 Doe Library
Shinji Yamashita, Emeritus Professor of Cultural Anthropology at the University of Tokyo and currently at the UCLA Center for Japanese Studies, examines the positive role that tourism could play in the reconstruction of devastated communities. In particular, he examines the implications of “volunteer tourism,” as a new form of tourism that emerged after the disaster and helped form kizuna or “social ties” between the devastated areas and the rest of the world. He also discusses new developments of anthropological practices in Japan in the post-disaster context.

Women's Work in the World Economy: A Personal & Political Perspective: Laura Tyson
HarvEst Distinguished Women Lecture Series
BERKELEY GRADUATE LECTURES
4:10 p.m. | International House, Chevron Auditorium

Economic growth around the world is influenced by who is in the workforce and what they are paid. Women's participation and compensation are shifting under the influence of social and economic trends at the national level and on a global scale. Laura Tyson (Haas School of Business) will share some of her own experiences, observations, and analysis as she makes a case for greater gender parity for economic growth, including how economic policy can influence the recruitment and retention of women in workplaces worldwide.

Neoliberalism + Biopolitics
THE PROGRAM IN CRITICAL THEORY
Continues on Feb. 28, 9:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m. | 315 Wheeler Hall, Maude Fife Room
Neoliberalism + Biopolitics is a two-day conference featuring lectures and panels on neoliberalism and biopolitics by major thinkers currently working to develop and problematize these two concepts. As both objects of study and frames for analysis, neoliberalism and biopolitics have served as key ciphers over the past two decades for those attempting to appreciate the novelty of contemporary political rationalities, forms of social control, technological developments, and economic orders. Part of the ambition of this conference is to interrogate the compatibility or incommensurability of different approaches seeking to deploy both concepts.

WORK, WORK, WHILE EMIKO GOES TO COLLEGE (45” X 45”), HAND GROUND MINERALS ON SILK AND HANDMADE JAPANESE PAPER

ON EXHIBIT AT THE TOWNSEND CENTER
Close To Home Yet Far Away: Craig Nagasawa
On Exhibit: March 2 – June 12, 2015

“A painting can reside simultaneously in its material presence—physical colored minerals, their arrangements on paper or silk—and its illusory presence—the evocation of illusion, forming in the viewer a convincing belief in the presence of space and time. The exchange between the real and the imagined is a perceptual experience where the personal and the public, the local and the foreign can exist simultaneously. I use minerals and stones as pigments, processing them by pulverizing and hand-grinding them into many different levels of texture from coarse to fine. I apply these pigments to silk and Japanese paper with hide glue, a process that results in a subtle surface refraction. These are the techniques of ancient Japanese painting. I have reconstructed these time-consuming processes as both a form of resistance to cultural erasure and an acknowledgement of the existence of a space where the personal and the public, the local and the foreign can coexist.”

Exhibit hours are Monday-Friday, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. The exhibit is located in a meeting space; call 510-643-9670 in advance for room availability.

2 Comfort Women Wanted
CENTER FOR KOREAN STUDIES (CKS), DEPARTMENT OF ETHNIC STUDIES
4:00 p.m. | 180 Doe Library
This film brings to light the memory of 200,000 young women, known as “comfort women,” who were systematically exploited as sex slaves in Asia during World War II, and increases awareness of sexual violence against women during wartime. The gathering of women to serve the Imperial Japanese Army was organized on an industrial scale not seen before in modern history. The “comfort women system” is considered the largest case of human trafficking in the 20th century. For more information: http://www.changjinlee.net/cww/index.html

L. The Field of Guanxi Studies

INSTITUTE OF EAST ASIAN STUDIES (IEAS), CENTER FOR CHINESE STUDIES (CCS)

9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m. | 180 Doe Library

Guanxi, the often complex, multi-layered network of personal relationships that shape life and labor from the humblest village to the pinnacle of power, continues to be a concept key to understanding China today. Since the publication in 2002 of Social Networks and the Changing Nature of Guanxi, edited by Thomas Gold, Doug Guthrie, and David Wank, a distinct field of studies has emerged involving scholars from the social sciences, business, and area studies. This conference draws together more than a dozen experts from around the world to share their recent research and thinking about guanxi, its historical and cultural foundations, and contemporary evolution along with China’s reform and globalization.

This conference continues March 7 at the Institute of East Asian Studies, 1995 University Avenue.

L. Risk and Rationality: Lara Buchak

Berkeley Book Chats

TOWNSEND CENTER FOR THE HUMANITIES

12:00-1:00 p.m. | Geballe Room, 220 Stephens Hall

Professor of Philosophy Lara Buchak specializes in decision, game, and rational choice theory. Her new book Risk and Rationality (Oxford, 2013) analyzes the principles governing rational decision-making in the face of risk and how an individual takes risk into account when making a decision. Experimental data in economics and psychology has shown that there is a gulf between the orthodox theory of rational decision-making (expected utility theory) and how individuals behave in practice. This discrepancy is typically thought to indicate that individuals fall short of ideal rationality. However, Buchak argues that the problem is in fact the orthodox theory: it dictates an overly narrow way in which considerations about risk can play a role in an individual’s choices. She argues for an alternative, more permissive, theory of decision-making, one that allows individuals to pay special attention to the worst-case or best-case scenarios, among other “global features” of gambles.

FRIDAY, MARCH 13

1. South Africa After Mandela
   CENTER FOR AFRICAN STUDIES, OFFICE OF THE CHANCELLOR, AND THE TOWNSEND CENTER FOR THE HUMANITIES
   10:00 a.m.-6:30 p.m. | Geballe Room, 220 Stephens Hall
   South Africa recently marked the twentieth anniversary of its first democratic elections and the momentous passage of one of the great leaders who made this political transition possible, Nelson Mandela. While the post-apartheid era is often thought of in glowing terms outside South Africa, the current situation within the country provides ample evidence that the legacies of state-sanctioned violence, economic inequality, and institutional racism are still very much alive. This symposium features key voices from the generation of South Africans who have come of age in a post-apartheid world. It is being staged in dialogue with the March 11 Cal Performances concert by Hugh Masekela and Vusi Mahlasela and the March 12 screening of the film A Letter to Nelson Mandela.

   Reconciliation in Retrospect
   10:00 a.m.-12:00 p.m.
   Session 1 features Gillian Hart (Geography, UC Berkeley), filmmaker Khalo Matabane, Siphokazi Magadla (Political and International Studies, Rhodes University), and Catherine Cole (TDPS, UC Berkeley).

   Marikana and its Aftermath

COMING IN APRIL

Jane Taylor, Playwright & Cultural Critic

Balancing Acts: Truths, Boasts, and Videotape

 Una’s Lecture

TOWNSEND CENTER FOR THE HUMANITIES

April 13, 6:00 p.m. | Banatao Auditorium, Sutardja Dai Hall

Una’s Lecturer Jane Taylor will consider the arts of memory and the will to reconciliation in recent history. Drawing on texts ranging from Shakespeare’s Titus Andronicus and Diderot’s The Paradox of the Actor to Arendt’s Eichmann in Jerusalem and Caryl Churchill’s Far Away, Taylor will discuss obligations of sincerity and authenticity, values staged in the western tradition.

Jane Taylor holds the Wole Soyinka Chair of Drama and Theatre Studies at Leeds University. A South African who has both creative and scholarly interest in puppetry, she has written plays for Handspring Puppet Company, such as Ubu and the Truth Commission, and has edited a critical study of the performance troupe. Taylor is currently working on a large-scale study of the performance of sincerity, examining the impact of the Reformation on modes of self-presentation.

Professor Taylor will be in residence March 31 - April 30, 2015. She will offer a five-week graduate seminar entitled “Neither Locke nor Diderot: Sincerity, Toleration, and a Theory of Acting.”

The Una’s Lecture is free and open to the public. Event contact: townsend_center@ls.berkeley.edu
